I personally do not identify myself as typical Hmong. I have learned a lot more about the Taiwanese 2

Since I've attended CRC, I have met many students of diverse backgrounds and most of them were relatively friendly. However, I tend to stick to people who share similar interests to me so I can't say that I interact with other students significantly.

I come from a large Filipino family. I can be shy, but that's okay. I've made some best friends at CRC, and I believe that CRC has helped me become more aware of my own cultural differences and has increased my pride in them. As a result, I have become much more comfortable standing up for myself in situations where I feel underrepresented.

Yes, because not all white people are the same and not all black people are the same. Yes, within each culture there are different traditions and practices.

No, because there are different groups of people that identify as Asian. No, because CRC didn't teach me anything about Oriental American. It's very difficult to generalize about people.

No, because I already have general awareness about everyone. No, I interacted with many friends of different backgrounds. Sort of. Not at all. Yeah kinda. No not really. I was raised to be kind. Yeah i feel more accepted in classes.

No, it hasn't. I've been aware of the things that go on around campus. Yes, within each culture there are different traditions and practices.

Yes, because I was raised to be kind. Not really. I interacted with many friends of different backgrounds. Yes, because not all people are the same and not all black people are the same.

Yes, my cultural background impacts my self-identity because it makes me feel unique and different. No, because I feel that CRC has helped me become more aware of my own cultural differences and has increased my pride in them. As a result, I have become much more comfortable standing up for myself in situations where I feel underrepresented.

Yes, because I am not aware of all the things that go on around campus. Yes, because I was raised to be kind. No, because I already have general awareness about everyone.

CRC has made me more culturally Filipino. I am of Filipino descent, so it was important for me to reconnect with my roots and learn more about my culture. CRC has provided me with many opportunities to experience the traditions and values of other cultures. For example, this week there has been a Native American celebration, and I have learned a lot about their culture through the activities and discussions. I think it's important to be open to new experiences and to learn about different cultures. This has helped me to become more culturally aware and to appreciate the diversity of our world.

I am a student at CRC, and I have met many interesting people here. I have participated in a variety of clubs and organizations, and I have made many friends. The diversity of our campus is one of the things I love most about CRC. We have students from all over the world, and we are all looking for a place to call home. I have learned to respect others and to see the value in diversity.

I think CRC has helped me to develop a more positive outlook on life. I have met many people who have had different experiences and challenges, and I have learned to appreciate their perspectives and to see the beauty in diversity. This has helped me to become more open-minded and to see the world from different angles. I think CRC has helped me to become more confident in myself and to see the value in my own culture.
I am of Hispanic American heritage. When I first came to CRC, I thought my identity was something I had to develop. I learned that my identity is a part of me and is not something that I can change. Now I feel that I have a stronger sense of who I am.

As a member of the Hispanic American community, I have experienced prejudice and discrimination. However, I have also learned to stand up for my beliefs and to be myself, regardless of culture or background. I have been able to interact with others and have gained respect for all cultures because I am mixed with two completely different cultures.

In my classes, I have learned more about different cultures and traditions. I have been able to interact with others and have gained respect for all cultures because I am mixed with two completely different cultures.

I have been able to interact with others and have gained respect for all cultures because I am mixed with two completely different cultures. I have been able to interact with others and have gained respect for all cultures because I am mixed with two completely different cultures.

No, because I have always grown up in the white population so I never went through that experience before. My family has always been a very white family and they have never had that experience before. I do not have any family members who have had that experience before. So, I do not know how to respond to this question. Yes, the situations and experiences that I have gone through and communities that I have been a part of are very different from what CRC has exposed me to. Yes, because I have not been exposed to those situations and communities before. I have not been exposed to those experiences before. So, I do not have any knowledge or understanding of those situations and experiences. I do not have any experiences or knowledge of those situations and communities before. There are cliques at CRC and they each have their own culture. When they speak with each other, they understand their culture.

Most of the people I know have very little to say except about each other. It's as if they're afraid to express themselves or think for themselves. I feel like they're always trying to fit in with each other. It's sad.

Yes because there are so many people talking.

Yes, I've been in this situation before. It's frustrating.

I've noticed that there are many programs and clubs at CRC and they're only involved in their own culture. They're not participating in other cultures. I think that's a problem and needs to be addressed.

Yes, I've noticed lately through my classes that Latin American workers have been brought in for a better understanding of their culture.

Yes, I've noticed lately that there are many programs and clubs at CRC and they're only involved in their own culture. They're not participating in other cultures. I think that's a problem and needs to be addressed.

I've noticed that there are different cultures at CRC and at school. They don't speak with each other. They have different cultures here. They keep to themselves.

The clubs on CRC have increased my awareness. I know people in different clubs here and they say that we all live here. They have different people here.

Not through the world geography and cultural landscape geography classes they have. They taught me about different cultures around the world and how they live life.

So everyone has a different voice because of the culture/ethnicity. The majority is for African-Americans. They have a voice. They also have a Christian group. They embrace different cultures from all around.

Yes, I am in the Filipino club here, but not all of them are Filipinos. I joined the club because I was interested in learning more about the Filipino culture. I interacted with the students, groups, and clubs and just for that culture/ethnicity. The majority is for African-Americans. They have a voice. They also have a Christian group. They embrace different cultures here at CRC.

Yes because there are so many ethnic background differences. It makes me more aware of minority groups.

I am more aware of different cultures and we all blend in.

Yes because there are so many different cultures giving me the opportunity to learn about them.

Yes, I think that learning about other cultures has given me a new sense of appreciation and empathy for people from different backgrounds. I think it has also helped me to understand more about myself and my own cultural identity. It has taught me to be more open-minded and accepting of others, and to appreciate the diversity of human experiences. Probably the most important thing I have learned is not to judge people based on their cultural or ethnic background, but to get to know them as individuals and value their unique contributions to society.
Rachel

Yes, I think I have more respect and increased my awareness of cultural diversity in America. I know that everyone is different, even if from the same race or culture. This is because I have attended CRC, which has helped me to find out more about my own background, and for me to gain more knowledge of other cultures and minorities.

I have never faced bias, but I believe that everyone is treated equally at CRC, so everyone interacts well. Yes, I feel that they try to bring awareness to cultural diversity, not only for myself but for my children. I have learned that every culture has traditions that they should embrace.

Yes, especially in my soccer class.

Attending CRC has impacted my cultural identity because I have gotten to join an African-American club here at CRC where we talk about our culture, other cultures and try to understand their culture, religion and values.

I'm in the 2nd generation in college, I try to give it my all in college and try to set an example for my daughters.

I go to CRC for help (Viet and Blacks) and extend and offer their help to me.

I've always been exposed to different cultures in my life, I've always been able to speak to people no matter what culture they are.

I've always been able to stand up for myself, but always won't be afraid to white. I had a sense of family and culture that many groups from different cultures have been a part of.

Yes, I'm a multi-ethnic African American student.

I've always been exposed to a lot of different types of people, I've learned a lot about Africa, I've been to Africa, I've been to different places around the world, I've been to different countries, I've been to different places.

Yes, I've been in a Gospel Choir class.

Yes, by involving myself in all groups, I've always been exposed to many different cultures and groups. I've been in the Anti-Racism Alliance, the Black Student Union, the Latino Student Union, the Asian Student Union.

Yes, like when clubs helped fundraise fundraisers.

Yes, I feel like gays/lesbian/bisexual groups are culturally respected because there's a very community-based and lots of activities going on and I just stay the same. Winner May Barona

Yes, I'm just a realist and in the cafeteria and also student gardens. My opinion about these is no such thing. My confidence stayed the same.

Yes, not really. I already knew who I am because that is how I am and my personality. I came from Fresno, so I already know a lot of people from other backgrounds. CRC has definitely provided me with the opportunity to interact comfortably with students from diverse backgrounds. At my previous school, I felt that there was not a lot of interest in the cultures other than my own. Not really, I already knew who I am. Not really. I already knew who I am because of where I grew up. I didn't face any bias in CRC yet.

Yes, different nationalities and cultures from mine - I respect them. I made a lot of new friends from different races and cultures. SOC 300

Yes, I identify myself as a guy who is outgoing, and family oriented. My cultural backgrounds impacts who I am because it was how I was raised - family comes first. I am close with my family and my church group is my family. They raised me to be who I am now. Tiffan Tran

No, not really. I have already learned to take things as they come from Fresno, so I already know a lot of people from other backgrounds. CRC has definitely increased my respect for cultural diversity because it is nice to see how many different groups of people can come together and connect. None

Yes, a lot of my friends go here with different nationalities and I met a lot of new people with different backgrounds. In high school, I wasn't as comfortable being myself because there's not many out of class opportunities to communicate / internet. Yes, because the classes are diverse, but my main point is not really. I already knew who I am because there are always going to be people who are different so she doesn't need to find a change. She didn't understand the question and when I tried to explain she didn't want to respond to the question.

Yes, because clubs help fundraise fundraisers. Sometimes I feel like the ethnic minority in U.S is the majority in CRC.

No, not really. It stayed the same. Stayed the same.
I am Hindu it has a large influence on me. Very much so; it has taught her to appreciate others and see that no matter the culture, all of us students are learning from each other and have goals that we are striving for. Yes, the attire of people what they wear. She believes that professors helped her with her cultural history has been a big influence on her being a multi-racial. There was other races but more Caucasian people. She has had the privilege to learn from and about Mexican, Chinese, American, Latino-American, and many other cultures. This helps and allows her to teach her children more about other people and their beliefs. Yes, very much so; because the culture I went to showed me that there was other cultures and I couldn’t speak; he had a machine that did his talking for him. Because this was a health class and it involved a final project to learn about your culture. We had the same goal that all of us students had; to graduate college and earn a degree that would help better his life.
